We do not have summer in winter nor winter in summer, nothing artificial, neither the enervating, depressing, health taking summers of the south country, nor the sultry sunstroke summers of the north.

The altitude is high enough to make you breathe full and deep, the air pure and healthful, and taking all the many advantages into consideration it is not surprising why so many are coming to this great country with opportunities to make homes.

As rapidly as the true conditions and advantages become known in a northern community, you will shortly find a representative of that community down in the Panhandle looking about. He usually buys a section or so, goes back, tells his friends and frequently chaperones a number of them on one of the low rate excursions now on twice each month, and at times even Amarillo, is almost taxed to accommodate the many visitors.
